CARES OF RUSSIA.

Crop Moving, the Harbin Tangle and Finland's Struggle-Ito's Untimely End. ST. PETERSBURG, Oct. 29.—Russians are much more concerned just at presen over the partial confirmation of their fears that bad traffic organization would interfere with marketing their great harvest than they are with the problems raised by the assassination of Ito, the occupation of Finland or the Czar's Italian policy. The English shipping lines which control Russian Baltic ports have raised freight rates on grain just at the time when they have the exporters at their mercy. Elevators scarcely exist on a serviceable scale and there are no other means of storage in the country capable of resisting a Russian winter The crops have been so bountiful, however, that the farmers have considerable money in their pockets and confidence affects the general situation.

The gravity of the situation arising from disputed administrative control at Harbin, however, cannot be underrated The Government says it was not unforeseen and simply throws the blame on the other Powers for preventing an effective police system from being established. People who have recently been in Har-bin describe it as the most lawless city in the world. There are fewer than 400 police officers and these are divided into squads.

police officers and these are divided into squads.

The white people of different nationalities have refused to pay the police tax unless they are allowed to organize themselves into a municipality. The Chinese Government refuses to allow this and the whites stand pat on their refusal to maintain a Russian force which, under the treaty with China, is alone empowered to maintain order along the Eastern Chinese Rallroad.

The extraterritorial practice whereby accused persons are tried by their own consular courts means, in the case of Ito's assassins, that they will be tried by Japanese, Japan having taken over Corea's independent treaty rights. But the prospect of a police deadlock in Harbin continuing makes extraterritoriality a grave political danger, in view of such cases as the recent conflict between the Russian railroad officials and the local Russian railroad officials and the local German Consul.

The acting chief of the Russian State

Cerman Consul.

The acting chief of the Russian State Department describes Ito's death as a calamity. The removal of his restraining influence in Japan, he says, is the worst thing that could have happened. He had invited M. Kokovseff to visit Tokio, where it was intended to give a demonstration of the Japanese Government's good will toward Russia, and it was only when Kokovseff's programme precluded him from making the journey that Ito spontaneously offered to meet the Russian Finance Minister in Harbin.

Ito's motive in seeking the meeting is understood to have been his desire to dissipate the idea that the Japanese policy regarding China is directed against Russian interests. He desired to combat especially the widespread opinion in Russia that Japan has been influencing China to seek occasions for frontier friction with Russia.

The Legislature of Finland has decided to consult the French banks which arranged her loan two years ago on the security of the forests and other public tors' probable position in view of the prospect of Finland losing one-eighth of her territory through the absorption of the province of Viborg into the Russian dominions. This step is viewed with severe disapproval in Russian Governmental circles, where French financiers have become most unpopular since the Russian imperial loan of last December was fixed on what Kokovseff considered usurious terms.
